REASONS FOR ALLOWANCE

The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance:

The previous rejections of claims 1-10 over Lewis (US 5275836) in view of the combination of Walton (<http://waltomfeed.com/self/rice.html>) and Ogawn (JP 92006330B Abstract Only) has been withdrawn in light of applicant's amendments made August 8, 2007. The previous rejections of claims 11-13 over Lewis (US 5275836) in view of the combination of Walton (<http://waltomfeed.com/self/rice.html>) and Ogawn (JP 92006330B Abstract Only), further in view of Mathews (US 3759380) has been withdrawn in light of applicant's amendments made August 8, 2007.

The closest prior art is Lewis (US 5275836) and Inosuke (JP Application (B2) No. 04-006330 as translated by the USPTO 2/26/07).

Lewis teaches a process for treating brown rice including a milling step to remove a controlled portion of the bran layer, 2-10% of the total rice grain, a (primary) immersing step wherein the rice grains absorb 20-40% water, a (primary) alpha-type conversion step (i.e. steaming), a drying and sorting step on a perforated belt (i.e. a screen) with air ejected towards the rice, and forming a final product with a polishing step. Lewis teaches of removing the water form the immersing step before the alpha-type conversion step. Refer specifically to Abstract, Column 3 lines 5 through Column 4 line 57, and Claims 1, 7, and 8. Lewis does not teach the amount of alpha-conversion that occurs in the primary alpha conversion step and/or further modification of the rice after the final polishing step, including a secondary immersing step, a secondary alpha-type conversion step, and a secondary drying step. Furthermore, there is no suggestion in the prior art to further modify the final polished rice product as taught by Lewis, specifically there is no suggestion for the treatment of the polished rice with a secondary immersing step, a secondary alpha-type conversion step, and a secondary drying step as instantly claimed.

Inosuke teaches a method of treating rice comprising water immersion until the rice reaches a water content of about 40% depending on the variety of rice, water removing, a primary alpha type conversion by steaming until the alpha level of the rice is 50-60%, hot-air drying, and a secondary alpha conversion by wet-heating. Refer specifically to Page 3 paragraph 3 through Page 5 paragraph 1. Inosuke teaches that the benefit of the process, specifically the first alpha conversion step to 50-60% alpha conversion and the secondary alpha conversion step is prevention of caking and the formation of rice with excellent taste and texture (Page 2 paragraph 2 through Page 3 paragraph 2 and Page 5 paragraph 2). Inosuke does not teach of a final polishing step for polishing the rice grains obtained in the first drying step or a secondary immersion step prior to the secondary alpha conversion step. Furthermore, there is no suggestion in the prior art to polish the rice grains in the process as taught by Inosuke after the first drying step or to immerse the rice grains prior to the secondary alpha type conversion, as instantly claimed.

Thus, although the individual processing steps of the claimed invention have been known, there is no teaching or suggestion in the prior art of the processing steps in the specific processing order as instantly claimed.

Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled "Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance."
